Ruling on CIA Inquiry Likely

A Journal-American Exclusive

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 —

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee may decide today whether to investigate the Central Intelligence Agency, according to committee chairman J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.)

"It has been put on the agenda for today's meeting and we're going to take it up," Sen. Fulbright said. "There may be a decision."

His comments coming after Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy (D-Minn.), a committee member, placed before the Senate a resolution calling for an investigation by the committee of the CIA's impact on foreign policy.

A resolution seeking the establishment of a joint House-Senate committee on the CIA was introduced by Sen. Stephen Young (D-Ohio).

The committee meeting today will be behind closed doors.
